WALKING TOUR WITH PATRICK AHEARN

Architect Patrick Ahearn's tours include residences like this one as well as public spaces.

If you love architecture and history, and you're planning a visit to Edgartown during the Martha's Vineyard Food and Wine Festival in October or during Christmas in Edgartown, sign up ahead of time for a walking tour of the village with architect Patrick Ahearn, who has restored or renovated more than 160 buildings in the historic downtown district. Ahearn is passionate about how a pedestrian scale works in a 300-year-old town that remains strollable and is, in his words, an original example of what is now called new urbanism: The village has mixed residential and commercial zoning, friendly walking areas, cottage gardens, and deliberately designed views to the water. Ahearn's new book, Timeless, was published this winter. He will do a book talk (with tour) at the Carnegie building this June. Visit www.patrickahearn.com for more information.

SHOP THE LOOK

Vineyard Sound sings a cappella.

Looking for boat shoes, brick-red shorts, summer shifts and button-down shirts in bright colors and patterns? Edgartown retailers will help you get your prep on. Start on North Water Street with Vineyard Vines, but don't miss Sundog, Summer Shades, and Katydid on Main Street, and Island Company North on South Water Street. For the rebel in the group, the Boneyard on Main Street offers surf-skate styles.

saturday morning with Sara Webber

Typically, we wake up and we go for a run. John runs to Katama and I actually love to run to Morning Glory Farm. I might pick up some salads there, or some cheeses to pair with our wines. If we can escape, we love to go to Sea Spa for a massage. I also like the Saturday morning spin class at Evolve Pilates. In the evening we love the oysters at 19 Raw and the tacos at Backyard Taco.

LIVE FROM EDGARTOWN

On summer nights in Edgartown, there's live music in the air. At the free Tuesday night dock dances, Vineyard bands perform for enthusiastic crowds on Memorial Wharf. There's also no cover charge at the Port Hunter restaurant's live music nights, and Vineyard Square on North Water Street hosts outdoor shows too. A popular venue with a view is the WMVY porch concert series on the Harbor View Hotel porch.
